The Bosch standard product warranty only applies to the combination of hardware and software in the exact configuration, and with the relevant updates, as delivered by Bosch. Without prejudice to any licensee’s right to apply the provisions of a relevant software license, including, for the avoidance of doubt, the right to modify any source code under an applicable open source license (to the extent applicable), any modification of any software delivered with or as part of the product may render any warranty, which is different from the relevant open source warranty, on the whole product or any parts thereof null and void, and Bosch is entitled to charge fees for any services in relation thereto. This exclusion or limitation of warranty is without prejudice to the warranty as applicable under any open source license, which remains applicable.